

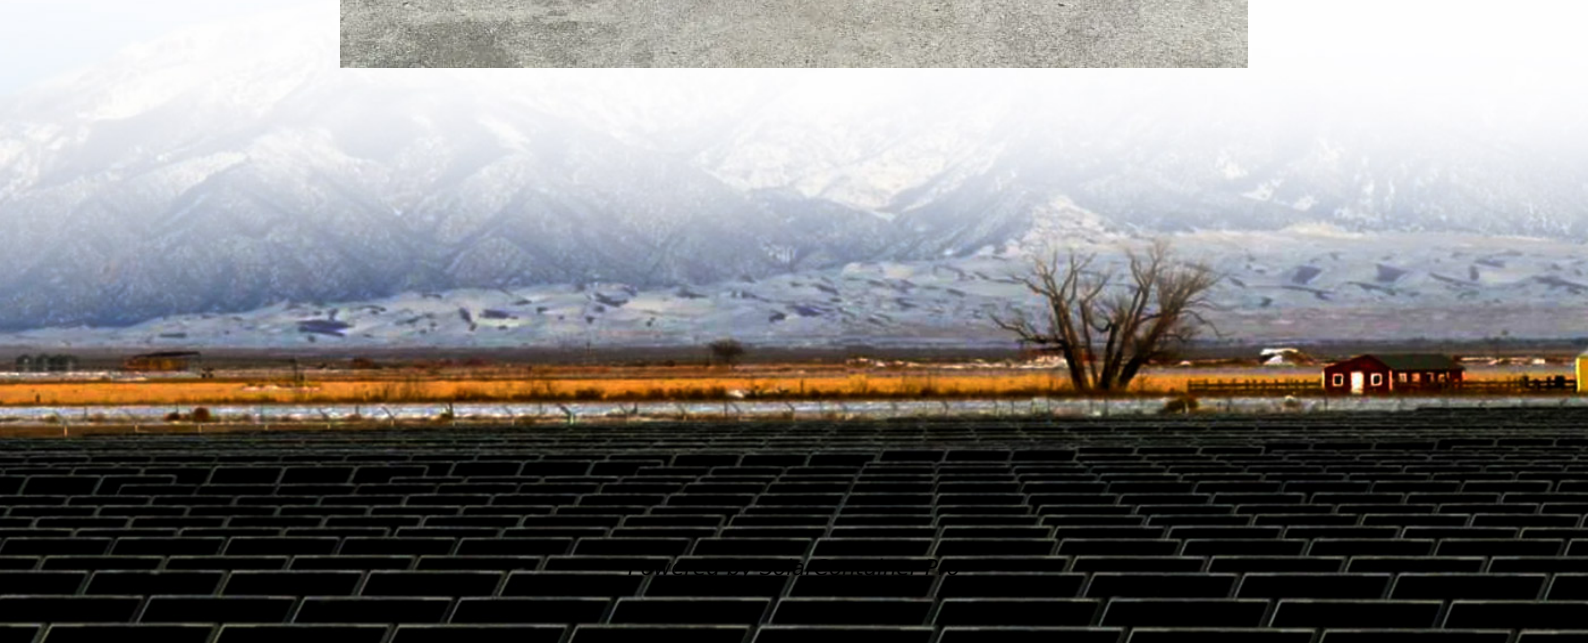

Photovoltaic inverter infringement

Overview

Did SolarEdge infringe patents?

The lawsuits said SolarEdge's optimizers and other components infringe the patents. The company asked the Delaware court for an unspecified amount of money damages and a court order banning sales of the infringing systems. It also requested an import ban on some SolarEdge products from the U.S. International Trade Commission.

Does AMPT have a patent infringement lawsuit against SolarEdge?

Ampt has filed a patent infringement action involving claims from eight of its US patents in the US District Court in Delaware against SolarEdge, seeking a finding of patent infringement, substantial monetary damages, and an injunction.

What specific technology did SolarEdge allegedly violate patents on?

SolarEdge is under investigation for allegedly violating patents on power optimizers that contain high-efficiency power converters that both allow maximum power-point output and use operational boundary conditions that continue producing power during conditions that might otherwise require the optimizer to be bypassed.

Did SolarEdge violate patents on power optimizers?

SolarEdge is under investigation for allegedly violating patents on power optimizers that contain high-efficiency power converters. These optimizers allow maximum power-point output and use operational boundary conditions to continue producing power during conditions that might otherwise require the optimizer to be bypassed.

What is the ITC action against SolarEdge?

In the ITC action, Ampt asserts that SolarEdge infringes one or more claims from U.S. Patents Nos. 9,673,630 and 11,289,917.

What is AMP LLC v SolarEdge Technologies Inc?

The cases are Ampt LLC v. SolarEdge Technologies Inc, U.S. District Court for the District of Delaware, No. 1:22-cv-00997 and In the Matter of Certain Solar Power Optimizers, Inverters, and Components Thereof, U.S. International Trade Commission, No. 337-3630.
